

PROFILE

Keihin Electric Express Railway Co., Ltd. (commonly known as Keiikyu), is one of the 15 major private railways in Japan. Serving as a link between central Tokyo and the southern metropolitan area, the Company plays an important role in Tokyo's public transportation system.

Since the Company was founded in 1898, Keiikyu's management philosophy has been to contribute to society by creating new value through business activities that support urban lifestyles. Along with its core railway and road transportation businesses, the Keiikyu Group aims to realize further development through its diversified real estate, tourism and leisure, and distribution operations.

In its railway operations, Keiikyu carries approximately 1.13 million passengers daily on its 87.0-kilometer railway network linking Shinagawa, which is expected to see even further development in the future as one of Tokyo's sub-central towns, with Kawasaki, Yokohama, Yokosuka, Zushi, and Miura in Kanagawa Prefecture. In November 1998, the Company achieved its long-standing goal of providing railway services to Tokyo International Airport (Haneda Airport). With the opening of Haneda Airport Station, Keiikyu has been instrumental in greatly improving access to the airport. The number of passengers has continued to rise, and on the second anniversary of its opening, in November 2000, the total number of passengers exceeded 30 million. Following the planned opening of a new terminal at Haneda Airport in 2003, demand from passengers for Haneda Airport is expected to rise even further and to make a larger contribution to the Company's future revenue.

Centered on Keiikyu's core transportation operations, the Company will continue working toward maximizing corporate value by providing superior services that meet the needs of regional communities.
